FINANCE AND TRADE.

OUR REVIEW of the cotton market last week reported middling cotton in New Yook at 10[c; It declined next day to 12 13-16c, on Monday to 12] . New Orleans was quoted 12] and has so remained for two aud a ha'f weaks. Livespeci quoted 6.5.164, which on Wednesday fell to 6)-1 and on Thursday to 63 164. Memphis quoted 12c, and has remained at that figure all week.

This statement shows a decline during (Monday), was once more a prey to a Liver, oil. These changes, however, the same. The continued full receipts, and the freedom with which cotton pours into Liverpool, has not et all previous ideas and calculations and lef the vicus ideas and calculations and lef the bales site the statement of Saturday at with the atmosphere. Our receipts, including arrivals after the official statement of the first out of the strength is useless repeating what has been said the last three or four weeks, for the situation is unchanged, "too much cott on" fell to class law action is unchanged, "too much cott on" fell to class law action is unchanged. market. Middling cotton and above dium grades and middling inclined to hold their prices, with some firmness; be "soft," the superior grades were medium grades are in fair demand, and firm. Prices remained unchanged. Quoall below it has been weak, dirty cottons | tations at the Memphis cotton exchange selling down to 5: Ellison & Co.'s Liv-erpool Annual Revew, ree satly publish-ed, afterspeaking of influences that were so disastrous to busines, in England last year, the effects of which the cotton market felt heavily, remarks those in-fluences are still producing results adverse to the prosperity of that trade, and coatinues: "Some day a great change will come, but when, it is im-possible to say. So ar as cot-ton is concerned, all that we have to say for the present is, that prices are below the average cost of production; that consequently, sooher or later, a suarp reaction must come; and, therefore, that spinners and manufacturers will get wisely in not risking much in the form of uncovered contracts for the forward delivery of yarns and goods. Last year the average price of middling uplands was 713, but so low a figure would not have been witnessed if it had not been for the discredit and disorganization which followed the Collie and other failures; and unless some unforeseen political or financial occurrence takes place, we shall be surprised if the average price for 1876 is not much higher than the figure now current." Watts & Co.'s excellent Liverpool Cotton Reportrays the demoralization in the marwas as great as they ever known it to be, indorses the following, copied from a Liverpool paper as literally true; "If we had been on the eve of a general European war, or in the midst of an unprecedented monetary panie, things could not have put on a worse appearance. That a whole community of sbrewd tusiness men should have allowed themselves to be the victims of

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION Offers no essential not only as compared with last week, but with very many weeks before. Money is in plenty. It does not pay for keeping, yet it is kept and not invested, and there is consequently still a plethora on the market, for borrowers are few and their wants small. There are plenty of people that want money, but those are the people that cannot get it. When a man is wealthy enough to want nothing, there is not a bank in town that will not rejoice to take his paper. The bank discount rate is the usual 10 per cent. The banks have complained of duliness all week; yesterday their principal occupation was to pay out checks. Exchange is in reduced offertheir principal occupation was to payout checks. Exchange is in reduced offering, as may be expected from the heaviness of the cotton market. The light call for it prevents inconvenience, but the banks would much like to have a better supply. Our stock of cotton has been below that at the same time last year all the season until now; it was yesterday 69 000 bales, against 57,800 on the last day of last February. Levee Paragraphs. Honors to the King! Szaps, mamma, just look at the folks! Thermometers went up to seventythree degrees Sanday.

The King expressed himself highly delighted with our marine display. The City of Augusta brought most of the Osceola's passengers to the city.

Barometers came to a stand on Sun-day, therefore the beautiful weather of The Audy Baum arrived about four o'clock with a splendid trip of freight and full of passengers.

The levee was too much crowded with the performances of King Momus () admit of any business whatever. The Mississippi has been on a stand here the past four or five days, but commenced declining slowly yesterday.

The City of Augusta brought in a fine trip of passengers from White river. She leaves again to-morrow evening. Old Neptune was in his happiest mood yesterday, and gave us weather and water su table for the grand occasion. Captain J. F. Noel, of S'. Franci river, is in the city in search of a boa 'o take the place of the Ida Stockton in that stream. We are under obligation to Mr. John Brown, one of the pilots of the City of Augus a, for particulars about the sinking of the Osceola.

The Ella coming along soon after the disaster to the Osceola, was signalled and went to her relief, taking off all the cotton that could be got at. Captain William Ezell, sgent of Brown & Jones, coal dealers, at Ter-rene, was a passenger up on the Thompson Dean, and will celebrate Mardi Gras

All the packets in port yesterday dis played their bunting at the masthead, too'ed whistles, fired cannon and otherwise honored the advent of the King into the city. Among our visitors yesterday we met

Mr. Len J. Noel, a son of Captain J. F.

Noel, and formerly one of the clerks of the John B. Maude, but now a merchant at Carson's landing.
In the case of Watson vs. steamer Eliza Fox, Judge Brown, United States district judge, confirmed the report of the clerk, and ordered a distribution of the funds as reported. There was a display of magnanimity truly commendable yesterday among the marines. There were not bands enough to go around, and one borrowed from the other until sll were supplied

Disasters are somewhat like fish; they come in schools. In another column will be found the particulars of the burning of the beautiful and majestic Mary Bell, at Vicksburg, and of the sinking of the St. Francis river packet Osceola, just below Greenfield's. William (Pat) Morrison, now of Little Rock, but formerly of the Adams Arkansas river packet line, has come over to enjoy the day we celebrate. Little Rock could not scare up enough fun for Pat on Mardi Gras day, and he wisely came to Memphis, where the thing is done right. Captain J. R. Edwards, an old-time Memphis mate—who figured here in the days of the old Ben Franklin and here associates in Big Muddy navi-gation before the war—is in the city taking in all of Mardi Gras. The old salt is sdrift, but will tackle on to something substantial before many ebbs and flows of the tide. Among the distinguished visitors to the city we have met Mr. John W. Clark, proprietor of the Chester Driving Park at Cincinnati. Mr Clark has credentials, duly signed and sealed by the King of the Carnival at Cincinrati, commissioning him Knight of the Turf. Mr. Clark was enjoying himself among The pretty little Nettie Jones cut a fantastic figure when the royal flagship A J. White came into port. The Nettie and a fowling-piece aboard, which was fired at regular intervals of one minute, giving forth sounds like young thunder, which were echoed and re-echoed from bank to bank, as the little tug gracefully described a circle around the White. Her capers aroused a deafening enthu-

The Illinois was the royal convoy to his majesty's flagship yesterday, and was crowded with ladies and gentlemen, who were one voice in praise of the palatial steamer and her gallant officers. Commodore George W. Cheek was in command of the roof, while Captain Joe Spears had charge of the cabin. Dancing ruled the hour, going and coming. The King may relate that such an elegant company did him the honor to compose his escort from the Cave of
